The background is a dark, textured granite surface. On the left and right sides, there are vertical strips of lighter-colored granite. Each strip features a relief carving of a human face in profile, facing right. The carvings are detailed, showing the nose, lips, and hair. The central area is a darker, more uniform granite texture.

There are many different types of minerals in granite, some of which appear like small, shiny flecks or longer veins of varying colors. Granite itself comes in many different natural colors and can be polished or finished in many different ways.

Granite is an igneous rock, which means it was once molten and formed as it cooled deep within the earth.

Granite is a dense-grained, hard stone. Quarried from the mountains of Italy, the U.S., Canada, India, Brazil, China, and dozens of other countries around the world, Granite is one of the most popular natural stones in the market.
